Ruth Andrews is the Co-curriculum Manager at Stellenbosch University. Her current role involves shaping the co-curriculum space through creating structures and processes, as well as providing training opportunities for staff and students towards building excellence in the co-curriculum space. Prior to joining the Stellenbosch University community, Ruth's work involved various aspects of leadership formation and training at a number of corporate, non-profit and educational institutions such as Rhodes University; Allan Gray Orbis Foundation and Mandela Rhodes Foundation. As a scholarly educational leader, Ruth firmly believes in integrating the scholarship of learning and teaching into the praxis and practice of the co-curriculum at Stellenbosch University. And in doing so, in Colby and Sullivan's words "develop a discourse that includes character, ethics, values, virtues, meaning-making, feeling and spirituality together with problem solving and critical thinking" as a foundation for leadership formation.
